Harm Reduction: Reducing Illness Caused by Smoking

Tuesday, June 25, 2019

1:00 - 2:00pm

The elimination of smoking has been a long-term goal for public health. However, there continue to be smokers who struggle to give up the smoking habit and nicotine addiction. This webinar will review strategies that can reduce the harm from smoking and smoke exposure to loved ones. These include:

- lowering the nicotine content of cigarettes
- reducing the number of cigarettes smoked
- transitioning nicotine delivery systems

The webinar will review the literature on the impact of harm reduction on health outcomes and among special populations. We will also discuss the pros and cons of harm reduction among smokers.
